

The Shah of Persia

Though advanced in years, has hair of raven hue. Gray hairs are strictly prohibited in his dominions, and hence the large shipments to that country of Ayer's Hair Vigor, by the use of which the Shah's subjects save not only their hair but their heads. Ayer's Hair Vigor restores the natural color of the hair. It should be on every toilet-table.

"Some time ago my hair began to fade and to fall out so badly that I thought I should be bald; but the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor has restored the original color and made my hair strong, abundant, and healthy. It does not fall out any more."—Addie Shaffer, 540 Race st., Cincinnati, Ohio.

"My hair (which had partly turned gray) was restored to its youthful color and beauty by the use of a few bottles of Ayer's Hair Vigor. I shall continue to use it, as there is no better dressing for the hair."—Gaild Gapp, Georgiana, Ala.

AN INTERESTING INTERVIEW About Microbes.

A Lincoln Doctor Tells a "Journal" Reporter Something About Those Infinitesimal Organisms Which are now Recognized by Scientists as the Cause of Disease—Professor Koch and His Cure for Consumption.

Reporter—Doctor, we hear a great deal of late of Professor Koch, the celebrated German physician; was his discovery a failure?

Doctor—Only partially. Professor Koch has convinced the world that the cure of disease depends entirely on the removal of the cause and while his method is somewhat disappointing and the results not entirely satisfactory, still this is due to the difficulty of reaching the site of the germ—the bacillus tuberculosis—which will not be destroyed by any of the remedies now in use. However, he has started a wave of investigation in medical science which will roll down the ages and finally conquer death dealing consumption as vaccination conquered smallpox.

Reporter—Are there any other diseases caused by this same germ?

Doctor—Yes, a few, but one of the most prevalent diseases in this climate and one which does as much damage as consumption is caused by an altogether different germ. I refer to catarrh. Why, do you know that nine out of ten cases of deafness or throat or nasal trouble are caused by catarrh, that over one-half the cases of eye disease and more than that per cent of dyspepsia and imperfect digestion are from the same cause?

Reporter—Does catarrh cause consumption?

Doctor—No, not directly, but indirectly it weakens the lungs by attacking the bronchial tubes and this gives the consumption germ a chance to find a lodgment and consumption and death follow.

Reporter—Can catarrh be cured?

Doctor—Yes, if taken in time; that is before the last stage is reached.

Reporter—What treatment is most successful?

Doctor—I employ a method based strictly on the germ theory. The nose, throat, ears, eyes and bronchial tubes, unlike the lungs, are easily reached by medicines applied by means of various improved instruments. These medicines destroy the germ and thus remove the cause of the disease.

Reporter—Do you use local treatment only?

Doctor—Not entirely. The blood being poisoned by the absorption of the catarrhal poison, must be purified by medicines administered by the stomach. The system being thus cleansed and the cause of disease removed the whole body soon returns to a state of perfect health. This plan of treating catarrh is known as and is always satisfactory both to physician and patient. Dr. Dennis is a graduate of three medical colleges and has had ten years experience, part of this time in the large hospitals of New York city and Chicago. He makes no charge for consultation. Cases out of the city successfully treated by correspondence. Hours, 9 to 12, 2 to 5, 7 to 9; Sunday, 10 to 12. Office corner of Tenth and O streets, Lincoln, Neb. Write for full particulars or call at office. Care guaranteed. Address: C. WARREN DENNIS, M. D.

YOUR ADVERTISING?

PRINTED INK is just what it purports to be, "a journal for advertisers." It is issued on the first and fifteenth days of each month, and is the representative journal—the trade journal, so to speak—of American advertisers. It tells the intending and inexperienced advertiser in plain, comprehensive articles how, when, and where to advertise; how to write an advertisement; how to display one; what newspapers or other media to use; how much to expend—in fact, discourses on every point that admits of profitable discussion. If you advertise at all, PRINTED INK can help you. Perhaps you expend but Ten Dollars a year in advertising; if so, PRINTED INK may show you how to obtain double the service you are now getting for one-half the money. A year's subscription costs but One Dollar; a sample copy costs but Five Cents. Advertising is an art practiced by many but understood by few. The conductors of PRINTED INK understand it thoroughly. Surely their advice, based on an experience of more than twenty-five years, will help you. Address:—

ROYALTY SMILED ON THE MATCH.

The Wedding of Prince Arbert and Princess Louise at Windsor.

The marriage of Princess Louise, of Schleswig-Holstein, to Prince Arbert, of Anhalt, has taken place in St. George's chapel, of Windsor castle, with all the pomp of royalty, and all aristocratic England has been in a flutter over it for a month. Queen Victoria and her immediate family of course occupied the place of honor, with the young emperor of Germany as her guest. The Prince of Wales escorted the German empress. The archbishop of Canterbury performed the service, and the bride moved up the aisle preceded by the choir of St. George singing a hymn composed for the occasion by the bishop of Ripon.

The situation was strongly suggestive of many important events in recent history, and the mixed relationship of the various parties presents a study in the complexities of royal and princely dynasties. The German emperor, to begin with, is the grandson of Queen Victoria, and the bride of the occasion is her granddaughter, but though the bride's father is a prince and her mother a princess, they have lived all their married life in England, their residence being Cumberland Lodge, and the bride has passed most of her life at Windsor castle, one of the residences of her royal grandmother. When Frederick, Duke of Augustenburg, gave up his claims to the long disputed Schleswig-Holstein, and that principality was absorbed by Prussia, his son, Prince Christian, went to England, and on July 5, 1866, was married to the Princess Helena, third daughter of Queen Victoria. Parliament did the handsome thing, voting the young couple an outfit of £30,000 and an annuity of £5,000. Their fourth child, Louise, born Aug. 12, 1872, was the bride on the recent occasion, and the groom was Prince Arbert, fourth son of the reigning Duke of Anhalt, which is a principality allowed to maintain its ancient independence, although it is nearly surrounded by Prussian territory.

Prince Arbert was born in 1864, and in consideration of the fact that his father aided the Germans with all his forces and was personally active in several of the battles of the Franco-Prussian war of 1870, Germany has guaranteed succession and family rights in Anhalt. Present at the wedding were the parents of both parties, the royal family of England, the German emperor and empress and attendant nobles and ladies, and a gorgeous array of titled gentlemen and ladies of both nations. The bride wore the same Honiton point lace worn by her mother at her marriage, and made over for that occasion from the dress designed by Prince Albert for Queen Victoria, and the merest outline sketch of the dresses of the six bridesmaids and other ladies fills many columns of English papers. The newly married pair proceeded directly to Berlin, where they will reside.

The Reign of the Bicycle.

It is estimated that at least 1,000,000 pounds of rubber are annually used for bicycle tires. The oldest patron of the seductive wheel, says a newspaper correspondent, lives in Connecticut. His name is Michael Cullen. He is seventy years old and rides daily from his home in Plainville to his work in the Bristol Brass and Clock shop. Mr. Cullen has worked in the Bristol shop for twelve years, and used to walk to and from his labor, but a year ago he learned to ride a wheel and now he glides back and forth between Plainville and Bristol with the swiftness of the wind. The distance between the places is three miles, and it is an exhilarating spectacle to see the old gentleman, his long white hair floating on the breeze, careering like mad along the country road. Mr. Cullen is as spry and hale as most men at thirty years of age, and can easily ride his wheel at the rate of ten or twelve miles an hour.

Some Ohio River Statistics.

A recent census bulletin gives some interesting figures regarding the Ohio river. The number of miles of navigable water on the Ohio and its tributaries is 928, excluding the 300 miles from Cincinnati to the mouth of the Ohio. The cost of improvements on these waters was $12,120,713, which is equivalent to $8.494 per mile of navigable route. The total number of passengers, including ferry passengers, carried during the year covered by the census investigation was 2,573,386, and the total number of tons of freight moved was 10,744,063. The ton mileage of this freight movement has been carefully computed to be equivalent to 2,076,866,145.

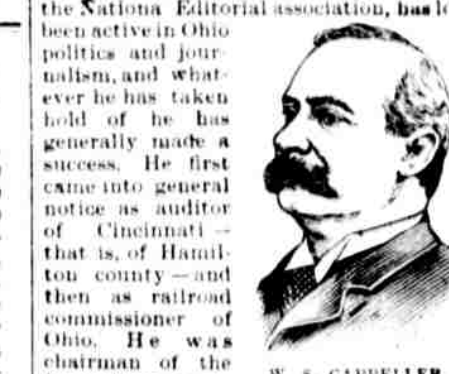

Distinguished French Invalids.

Two illustrious invalids are just now objects of sympathetic interest in France. Gounod's health has become so badly shattered as to forbid his doing any work whatsoever, and his physicians have denied him the sight of callers. The other distinguished sick man is De Lesseps, whose hold on life is regarded as very slight. He is eighty-seven, and lacks the physical vitality to rally from the illness that has prostrated him.

An Active Man Chosen President.

Wm. W. S. Cappeller, president elect of the National Editorial association, has long been active in Ohio politics and journalism, and what ever he has taken hold of he has generally made a success. He first came into general notice as auditor of Cincinnati—that is, of Hamilton county—and then as railroad commissioner of Ohio. He was chairman of the Republican executive committee of Ohio for several years, has been grand master of the Odd Fellows of that state and has held other positions of trust and honor.

He is now editor and principal owner of The Daily News, of Mansfield, O., and has such taken an active part in organizing the several local dailies of that state, having served four years as president of the association. All these years he has busied himself in politics, and has been a delegate to almost every national editorial meeting, being a ready and sparkling speaker, as well as writer. His family consists of a wife, three daughters and two sons.

ADDITIONAL SOCIETY

A very pretty wedding took place last Wednesday evening at the residence of Capt. D. C. Crawford, 1910 G streets. The contracting parties were Mr. William B. Cooper of Medford, N. J., and Miss Maggie B. Crawford who is well known in this city. Rev. Dr. D. S. Roberts performed the ceremony, after which an elegant supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Cooper were the recipients of many beautiful and costly presents. Those present were: Messrs and Mesdames H. Westerman, M. Cooper, John Barschel, L. A. Willis, R. D. Robinson, F. Beck of Cheney, Neb., Mrs. Hyland and Mrs. J. Vegt, Misses E. J. Hedges, Hattie Hedges, Lydia and May Hyland, Winnie Robinson, Alice Hartley of Creighton, Neb., Bessie and Annie Crawford, Nellie Smith, Messrs Smith, W. Stackhouse, C. E. Hedges, E. Michener, W. J. Adamson, Charles and Frank Crawford, Howard Smith, Thomas Hyland.

The grocers outing at Cushman park Wednesday was the largest picnic of the season. Train after train left the Burlington depot, each one crowded with merry pleasure seekers and it was estimated that altogether, including the large number that came in carriages, that there was full five thousand people on the grounds. The exercises were such as to afford ample variety for all and the arrangements which had been excellently managed made the day one of unusual enjoyment. At three o'clock the wholesalers and retailers crossed bats and had a five inning contest resulting in a victory for the former, 15 to 3. Then came a foot race for three silver dollars between Julius Erlenborn, Will Burr and Floyd Hotelling, Erlenborn winning first with Burr coming second. A sack race followed, Ed Huletz winning a little ahead of Henry Rigger, his only competitor. The refreshments in the park were elegant, the dancing in the pavilion superb and the music equal to the occasion. It was a great outing and redounds equal credit upon the park management and Mr. Milt McGowan of Robinson's grocery who assumed the arduous role of master of ceremonies.

His Peculiarity.

"Oh, yes! He's quite a remarkable man. Able to concentrate his mind on one particular subject no matter how great the crowd and confusion around him. His power of abstraction is simply wonderful." "What is his special branch of science?" "Kleptomania, I think they call it."—Washington Post.

The Dakota Hot Springs.

The improvements that have taken place at the Dakota Hot Springs during the past year make it now one of the most popular, attractive and desirable resorts of the country. In addition to the benefits to be derived from the use of the water, the superior climate and beautiful natural surroundings render it an especially attractive resort, while the curative properties of the water makes the Springs a rival of the famous Hot Springs of Arkansas. Ample hotel accommodations are provided at reasonable rates, and the journey to and from can now be quickly and comfortably made via the Fremont, Elkhorn & Missouri Valley Railroad, the only all rail line to the Hot Springs. Excursion tickets are sold at reduced rates. Full information can be obtained on application to Burlington Route—The Outing Season is Drawing On.

People have already begun planning their summer trips, and we would suggest that you post yourselves regarding the wonderful trout fishing in Estes park, Col. The health giving baths and quiet rest of Dakota Hot Springs, the hunting and fishing of Wyoming or the fashionable delights of Manitou. The Burlington will take you to any of them speedily and without fatigue. There are many other places in which you can spend the better part of the summer at the B. & M. depot or city office can tell you all about them. Call and get a book of summer tours and look it over. You will find it full of good things and valuable hints.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER'S SCHEME.

A Great Enterprise in Which Russell A. Alger is Interested.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Mr. John D. Rockefeller is now regarded as the richest man in America. His fortune is estimated at something like $130,000,000, and his income at nearly $10,000,000 a year. He testified himself, under oath, that he did not know how much he was worth, because it was impossible for him accurately to estimate his property.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER.

He has become a large owner in Northern Pacific railway property, and his possessions on the Pacific slope, especially in Washington, are very great. Mr. Rockefeller has conceived the idea of developing a scheme, with General Russell A. Alger as partner, which will involve the solution of some engineering problems almost as great as those which are engaging the attention of the engineers of the Nicaragua canal. This announcement is the first to reveal to the country what Mr. Rockefeller's and General Alger's purposes are.

In the state of Washington there is a lake but little known to eastern people. It is called Lake Washington. It is spring fed and about twenty-five miles long, from eight to ten miles wide, and has a depth of water sufficient to float the largest steamships. Puget sound is but twelve miles distant. Mr. Rockefeller's scheme is, in the first place, to build a belt line of railways around the lake, making connections with the great trunk lines running to the east. Next he and General Alger are going to build a canal twelve miles long, running from the lake to tide water. The lake is some sixteen feet above the sea level, and of course this difference of elevation must be overcome by a system of locks. The canal which it is proposed to build will be a genuine ship canal, capable of floating steamers engaged in the China trade.

It is Mr. Rockefeller's idea, and that of those associated with him that the ocean steamships will come to the sound and, by means of the canal, into this body of fresh water. That will result in the creation of a port of entry upon the banks of this lake, and Mr. Rockefeller is of the opinion that the future metropolis of the coast north of San Francisco may be located there.

The scheme is unparalleled in the history of commercial development. To run by means of a canal from salt water into an absolutely safe harbor of fresh water is to do that which is done nowhere else on the face of the globe. General Alger, notwithstanding his alleged political activity, takes far more interest in this scheme than he does in politics.

E. J. EDWARDS.

Mrs. Lew Wallace at Home.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Aug. 6.—Mrs. Susan E. Wallace is generally introduced to the public as the wife of the author of "Ben Hur," yet she is a writer of ability herself. Her "The Land of the Pueblos" has been characterized as "a poem and a history" by Benson J. Lossing. "The Repose in Egypt" is a charming account of the wanderings and musings of a party of poets and scholars.

A paper by Mrs. Wallace, "Leprosy in the East," originally published in The Sunday School Times, has been included in the report of the Smithsonian institution on the progress of oriental science in America during the year 1889.

THE WALLACE RESIDENCE.

Although a blue stocking, Mrs. Wallace is a notable housewife, and to see her at her best is to see her at her home here. To be met by Mrs. Wallace is a greeting from the goddess of hospitality herself, and when within the guest settles down into a delectable chair saying something like "My willing soul would stay in such a frame as this," and when Mrs. Wallace quotes one of her favorite eastern proverbs, "The guest is free to come, but not to depart," the visitor exclaims "Amen" in a way that might well turn a hostess pale.

Though she might shine in the society of any of the great cities, she prefers the leafy quiet of her home. Thus, instead of being exhausted, she retains, to nearly her sixtieth year, the goodly gift of making young hearts feel younger and bright faces look brighter.

The home of the Wallaces is a "modest brown cottage, small and prettily furnished and well kept," as the mistress herself describes it. Back of it is a forest primeval of beech trees, where General Wallace sits all day in summer, writing.

The piazza is Mrs. Wallace's favorite haunt. She says, "I have seen the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, but this is the best place after all and before all." She and the trees make love to each other there.
